Additional Project Remarks:

Seafood Good Labour Practices (SGLP) is a promising voluntary system. Many factories have shown strong support; however, a common question remains: "What are the tangible benefits of implementing SGLP?" Therefore, it is recommended that the ILO further promote and raise awareness among international buyers about SGLP initiatives. This would indirectly encourage more businesses to adopt and value GLP.

Given the successful collaboration with CSOs in SGLP activities in 2023, it is also recommended that future projects continue and expand further into the supply chain.

Comments from participating in the GLP Visit members.

- 1. Regarding the welfare committee, the company must publicize, provide knowledge about the importance of the duties of the welfare committee, and have incentive measures for migrant workers to participate in being representatives of the welfare committee.
- 2. The most comment boxes, workers rarely express their opinions, but will be presented to the supervisor or human resources department. The company will use the collection from various complaints then bring it to the Welfare Committee and discuss together. However, it is seen that there should still be a box for receiving opinions. as an alternative for workers.
- 3. This time, it was found that most companies are more enthusiastic and interested in labor. This can be observed from the fact that there is a Welfare Committee (WPC) in every company. There are attempts to persuade migrant workers to participate and be representatives in the WPC. In addition, it was found that labor documents in many companies were originally not in the language of migrant workers. However, at present, every company has documents in the language of migrant workers,

- although they may not be complete. They have been developed and improved continuously, starting with the necessary documents that workers want to know the most, such as money and holidays, and gradually proceeding with other documents.
- 4. There is more cooperation and acceptance of cooperation between the industrial sector and external agencies, such as in the area where civil society agencies work with the company, or in this activity, the International Labor Organization joined as an observer.
- 5. Good Labour Practices (GLP) are used as a basis and more labour systems and standards are developed, such as the Thai Labour Standard (TLS 8001), SMETA standards.
- 6. The International Labour Organization (ILO) also acted as an observer by walking around the accommodation provided by the factories for workers; Some factories were well-managed, some factories had more migrant workers, which made the area cramped, and the management saw the importance of taking care of the workers, so the factories had a project to improve the accommodation for the workers. And interviewing migrant workers (Myanmar) found that factories that built credibility and let the workers express their opinions had open interviews and gave various opinions. For factories where the workers did not fully trust them, in some questions or some opinions, the workers would avoid or not express those opinions.

- Songkhla Session:

The training program aimed to review and update representatives from member companies on the principles and practices of SGLP, enhancing factory-level understanding of Good Labour Practices (GLP) in the seafood industry.

The three-day training brought together representatives from 40 member companies, along with observers from two organizations—Plan International and the State Enterprises Workers' Relations Confederation (SERC). Additionally, trainers from a specialized training consultancy supported by the Ship to Shore Rights SEA project led parts of the sessions and provided guidance on training materials and techniques to further improve the SGLP training program.

Participants from the 40 member companies included staff from human resources, payroll, quality control, and quality assurance departments, as well as representatives from company welfare committees. A total of 101 participants attended the training (79 women and 22 men), including 8 migrant worker representatives from Myanmar who serve on their companies' welfare committees.

Seminar Conclusions

Lecture Topics Covered:

- Internal and external communication strategies to enhance understanding and access to SGLP.
- Recruitment approaches and employee retention strategies.
- Benefits of collaboration with Civil Society Organizations (CSOs).
- Guidance on implementing SGLP within the supply chain and addressing associated challenges.

To improve communication efficiency between employers and employees—both Thai and migrant—it was suggested to strengthen collaboration with various organizations, enhance engagement with welfare committees, and ensure feedback from employees is meaningfully addressed. These actions aim to build trust, improve organizational image, and increase overall work efficiency.

Case Studies:

• Pregnancy testing of female workers, discrimination issues, and the use of bathroom access cards by workers.

These case studies were used to facilitate discussion among seminar participants, allowing them to share experiences and perspectives. Valuable recommendations were also provided by trainers, the International Labour Organization (ILO), and participating civil society organizations.

Seminar and Meeting: A joint seminar was organized between the Thai Frozen Food Association, the Thai Tuna Industry Association, and civil society organizations. The participating civil society groups included Migrant Worker Groups (MWG), the Labour Rights Foundation (LRF), the State Enterprises Workers' Relations Confederation (SERC), the Employers' Confederation of Thailand (ECOT), Plan International Thailand, and Oxfam (Oxford Committee for Famine Relief: OXFAM).

The objective of the meeting was to discuss and enhance the effectiveness of grievance mechanisms. Two meetings were held on October 27, 2023, and May 24, 2024, respectively.

Meeting Summary:

The meeting acknowledged that the U.S. Department of Labor has removed Thai shrimp products from the TVPRA list, which previously alleged the use of child labor in shrimp production. However, issues related to forced labor remain, and fish products are still listed on the TVPRA list for forced labor concerns.

During the discussion, association representatives expressed that collaboration between member companies and the International Labour Organization (ILO) clearly demonstrates the importance of Good Labour Practices (GLP). They emphasized the desire for GLP to gain recognition from international buyers, as this would mark a true achievement of GLP's goals.

The ILO added that the private sector and trade associations must remain vigilant regarding forced labor issues to prevent future incidents. It was also noted that several countries, such as Indonesia, have shown growing interest in implementing GLP. Establishing GLP as a credible system could lead to its wider adoption in other countries.

Furthermore, the meeting was updated on ongoing labor-related efforts, such as the GLP training programs, covering GLP practices, recruitment, and human rights.

Establishment of the GLP Working Group

On July 24, 2024, at Meeting Room 2, 4th Floor, Department of Safety, Taling Chan Ministry of Labor — Subject: Discussion on the Appointment of the GLP Working Group."

GLP Working Group has been established, comprising representatives from the public sector—including the Department of Labour Protection and Welfare, Ministry of Labour; the Department of Fisheries; and the Department of Livestock Development, Ministry of Agriculture and Cooperatives—as advisory bodies. The group also includes members from the private sector, such as the Chamber of Commerce, relevant associations, civil society organizations, and the International Labour Organization (ILO), which serves as a technical advisor.

The Working Group is responsible for reporting on its activities and progress to the Good Labour Practices Committee (GLP Committee), which was officially appointed by the Ministry of Labour under Order No. 628/2563, dated December 16, 2020. Additionally, it reports to the National Project Advisory Committee (NPAC) of the Ship to Shore Rights Project.

4) World Day Against Child Labour (June, 12 2024)

On June 12, 2024, the Thai Frozen Food Association participated in a campaign to mark the World Day Against Child Labour 2024, organized by the Department of Labour Protection and Welfare.

The event included a pledge announcement and a symbolic show of unity to end child labour, conducted online via Zoom Meeting under the theme: "Let's act on our commitments: End Child Labour!" Participants in the campaign included government agencies, non-governmental organizations, employers, employees, children and youth, and the general public from both central and regional areas.
